Tax Information for Employees

This summary sets forth general principles in effect on May 1, 2022, that are expected to apply to employees who (i) are and remain resident in Denmark for the purposes of the tax laws of Denmark and do not carry out their professional activity in France. For definitive advice, employees should consult their own tax advisors regarding the tax consequences of subscribing to Capgemini SE shares (the “Shares”) under the Capgemini Group Employee Share Ownership Plan (“ESOP”).

This summary is given for informational purposes only and should not be relied upon as being either complete or conclusive.

The tax consequences listed below are described in accordance with Denmark and certain French tax law and tax practices all of which are applicable on May 1, 2022. These laws and practices may change over time.

I. Taxation in France

Your investment in the Shares should not give rise to taxation in France except for taxation of dividends received on the shares.

Under French domestic law, dividends paid by a French company to non-residents of France are generally subject to a withholding tax of 12.8%.¹

II. Taxation in Denmark

2.1. The share price discount

You will become subject to Danish tax on the share price discount granted to you in connection with your subscription of the Shares. Taxation will arise in the income year where subscription occurs.

The taxable share price discount will be determined as 1) the market value of the Shares on the day of subscription minus 2) the subscription price to be paid by you. For Danish tax purposes, the market value of the Shares should be determined on the basis of the share closing price on the day of subscription.

The taxable amount, i.e. the share price discount, will be taxed as ordinary salary income and will thus be subject to tax at progressive rates of up to approx. 56% including social security contributions.

2.2. Taxation of dividends

Dividends received by you on the Shares will be subject to Danish tax in the year where the dividends are declared by Capgemini SE.

The dividends will be taxed as share income at a rate of 27% or 42% depending on your overall share income in the concerned income year and your marital status. Your annual share income up to DKK 57,200 (consolidated threshold of DKK 110,600 for married couples) will be taxed at 27%. Any share income in excess of DKK 57,200 (DKK 114,400 for married couples) will be subject to tax at 42%. All figures mentioned are 2022-figures.

You should be entitled to a tax credit in Denmark for the withholding tax suffered on the dividend in France. It is expected that the tax credit would reduce the Danish tax payable on the dividend by an amount corresponding to the French withholding tax. You must, however, be able to provide documentation for the French withholding tax, if such documentation is requested by the Danish tax authorities.

2.3. Taxation of the Shares upon disposal

You will be subject to Danish capital gains taxation upon a sale or other disposal of the Shares.

A redemption of the Shares for cash upon expiry of the lock-up period (or later) will be treated as a sale and will therefore trigger capital gains tax if a gain is realized on the Shares. The same applies if you sell or transfer the Shares to a third party. Shares that are gifted away will be deemed to have been sold at market value.

The taxable gain/loss on the Shares will be determined as the redemption amount / sales price less the acquisition price of the Shares.

The acquisition price of the Shares is, for tax purposes, to be determined as the market price of the shares on the day of subscription (which is equal to your subscription price plus the share price discount which is taxed as salary at the time of subscription).

However, if you own shares in Capgemini SE that carry different acquisition prices and you do not sell all the shares at the same time, you must determine the taxable gain / loss on the Shares to be sold on the basis of the average your shares in Capgemini SE (rather than the acquisition price of all price of the shares being sold). This is because the taxable gain / loss must be determined in accordance with the so-called "average acquisition price method".

A gain on the Shares will be taxed as share income at a rate of 27% or 42%, depending on your overall share income in the concerned income year and your marital status. Your annual share income up to DKK 57,200 (consolidated threshold of DKK 114,400 for married couples) will be taxed at 27%. Any share income in excess of DKK 57,200 (DKK 114,400 for married couples) will be subject to tax at 42%. All figures mentioned are 2022-figures.

A loss on the Shares may be deducted against income from other listed shares. However, a loss is only deductible if the acquisition of the Shares is reported to the Danish tax authorities within the filing deadline for the tax return covering the year of acquisition. The information to be reported includes information on the identity of the shares, the number of shares acquired, the date of acquisition and the acquisition price. Your employer will submit this information to the tax authorities in January 2023, but you are obligated to ensure that the required data concerning your share acquisition is registered correctly in your personal online tax file within the tax reporting deadline applicable to the year of subscription, i.e. the year 2022.

To avoid interest charges, any tax arising from the disposal of the shares must be paid to the Danish tax authorities no later than 31 December in the income year where the disposal occurs.

2.4. Taxation of the SAR

It is believed that the SAR should be treated as a cash bonus for Danish tax purposes which is subject to tax as ordinary employment income at progressive tax rates of up to approx. 56%, incl. social security contribution (AM-bidrag). It is further believed that the basis for taxation is the pay-out amount and that taxation of the SAR will arise at the time of the pay-out.

III. Danish reporting and payment obligations

3.1. The share price discount and the acquisition of shares

Your employer will report the value of the economic benefit received by you at subscription of the Shares, i.e. the share price discount, to the Danish tax authorities. You are however, obligated to ensure that the economic benefit is included in your tax return covering the year in which subscription takes place, i.e. 2022.

Your employer will also report your acquisition of the Shares to the Danish tax authorities. Your acquisition of the Shares will be reported in January 2023. Upon receipt of the information, the Danish tax authorities will register your acquisition of the Shares in your personal online tax file, which is accessible via TastSelv at the tax authorities' website www.skat.dk. You are obligated to ensure that the information concerning your acquisition of the Shares is registered correctly in your tax file.

You are responsible for meeting all other tax reporting / information requirements applicable to the Shares. This means that you must report any receipt of dividends to the Danish tax authorities. The dividend must be included in your tax return covering the year where the dividend was declared. Further, you must report any capital gains gains/losses realized upon disposal of the Shares. The gain/loss must be included in your tax return covering the year of disposal.

You will also be directly responsible for the payment of the Danish taxes on the above income items. To avoid interest charges on the tax payable, payment must be made to the Danish tax authorities no later than 31 December in the income year where taxation arises.

3.2. The SAR

Your employer will report any cash bonus paid out to you under the SAR. You are however, obligated to ensure that the cash bonus amount is included in your tax return covering the year where the pay-out occurs.

Your employer will withhold tax from the pay-out of the bonus amount and will settle such tax with the Danish tax authorities. However, if any additional tax is charged on the bonus amount, you will be directly liable for the payment of such additional tax.
